

Portugal

Felisha Rodrigues-Aguiar

“Everywhere you look all you see is beautiful land!” This is how many travelers to Portugal explain their reaction to this beautiful land. Portugal is a place where people will love to live. It appears to be called “The Gentle Land”.

Portugal is covered with huge sheets of land. It extends almost 91,951 square kilometers. Portugal is separated into 2 zones. The north features Iberian mountain ranges, such as the Sierra da Estrada. In the south, terrain is less rugged, formed by hills and valleys. The islands in Portugal are Azores and Madeira. The Azores Island and the Madeira Islands are about 800 miles. Portugal is has big as the state of Indiana.

The weather in Portugal is very rainy and sunny at sometimes. The maritime temperature is cool and rainy in the north, and warmer and drier in the south. According to official paper, Portugal has 220 sunny days a year. Portugal is not a country that has hurricanes or tornadoes.

Plants and animals are common in Portugal. Portugal is a home to many endangered species of animals, such as the fin whale, monk seal, mad monk seal, and northern right seal. Some common animals are dears, wild goals, rabbits, birds, bulls, buffalos and lynx. In the mountain area some animals are found, such as wolves, and foxes. Portugal has many vineyards and is known of making wine by hand. Portugal has some flowers like the Silvia Flower and the Anthem Fleece Flower.

Portugal is a place where people love to live. Portugal's population is about 11 million. Portugal has mostly Portuguese people, some Spanish people, and some English people. Portugal almost has people from other counties or another states visit them about 3 times a mouth. Tourists do visit Portugal. However it will cost about less than $ 100 to visit Portugal. If you have enough money to visit Portugal, you can make your visit very unique and fun, and maybe you will want to go visit it again!